Ogdensburg, New Jersey (PRWEB) June 29, 2015

Elly McGuire, author of "Schmitt The Weather Dog: Daydream," Meteorologist Ron Trotta, and Schmitt The Weather Dog, have teamed up with the up and coming green tech company, Extreme Energy Solutions, Inc., located in Ogdensburg, New Jersey, to help promote healthier and more environmentally friendly choices in the hopes of bringing green technology awareness to the classrooms of children.

Together Extreme and the Schmitt the Weather Dog Team will begin their journey in encouraging both school administrators and children to consider more sustainable green products that end up in use in the classroom. The first stop on their list is the National Association of Elementary School Principals (NAESP) convention in Long Beach California, June 30 through July 2, 2015.

At the conference, Schmitt the Weather Dog and Meteorologist Ron Trotta will be the official weather team and headline entertainment where thousands are expected to attend. "We are glad to have Extreme Kleaner aboard," claimed Trotta, "the product works great, it's safe for pets, kids and the environment, and the company's mission to offer products and services that help serve humanity are very much in line with our beliefs in conservation and sustainability."

"The product, Extreme Kleaner, is crazy good, and I would only partner with a product and a company that is safe for the planet and my two-legged and four-legged family," added McGuire

When asked about what she thought about Extreme Kleaner, Schmitt the Weather Dog responded by giving it a four paws up.

Schmitt the Weather Dog, accompanied by McGuire and Trotta, have been at the center of over 60 elementary school assemblies this year, promoting STEM, the study of science, technology, engineering and math, through the use of their entertaining literacy and music program. Team Schmitt The Weather Dog has been coast to coast, bringing their program to schools throughout New York City, Los Angeles, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey.

At the end of each assembly, author Elly teaches about respect for animals and gives each student the opportunity to meet Schmitty The Weather Dog. Through corporate and private sponsors, student usually walk away with their very own copy of the "Schmitty the Weather Dog: Daydream" book.

"Science and math are at the core of green technologies, and we feel it is important to help foster younger generation's educational experience with information that will not only get them excited about preserving the environment, but also excited about the opportunities and possible career choices that may be available to them in the future," contributed [Samuel K.
